

Our Journey

The concept of a divorce service center came to be as a result of the private practice work of Courtney Fields McVey, LCSW. Specializing in high-conflict divorce as the child's therapist, Courtney recognized a need for a collaborative, multi-disciplinary model for individuals and families involved in divorce. Her 20-year career in comprehensive child welfare reform and program development led her reach out to attorneys, judges, other therapists, and national organizations to find like-minded individuals. The response was swift. Within 1 year of being in business, a solo private practice grew to an 8 member team of professionals with regular referrals from the judicial system. Courtney is passionate about making services affordable and accessible to all families in need across the state.

WHAT IS AN INTEGRATED SERVICE MODEL?

In most situations, the professionals working with a high-conflict family are in different offices and have little time to engage in regular collaboration. At DRCGA, all the professionals are under one roof, meet regularly, and the family is assigned a Family Care Coordinator as a main point of contact.

THERAPY FOR ALL AGES

Our staff is here to serve ages 2-adult. We offer a variety of services that include play therapy, cognitive behavioral, spiritual, and reunification therapy to name a few. Most insurance plans are accepted, including Medicaid CMOs.

PARENT COORDINATION

Whether court-ordered or voluntary, we are here to assist conflictual parents in making or adjusting parenting plans or navigating parenting decisions with a trained Parent Coordinator using a hybrid approach of mediation and psychotherapeutic techniques.

COURT-ORDERED SERVICES

Evaluations, reunification therapy, and supervised visitation are our most common court-ordered services. We work closely with the judicial system to come up with a viable plan for addressing some of the most complex family disruptions such as parental alienation, substance abuse, intimate partner violence, and child abuse allegations.
